ASDIS and AWEK at EuroCIS 2009

Retail specialists enter into strategic partnership

Berlin/Düsseldorf, February 10, 2009. The point of sale is the ultimate test in the retail industry: It's where products are revealed as good sellers or shelf warmers, and where success and failure become clear. Software companies ASDIS and AWEK have entered into a strategic partnership to further improve the quality of service and the speed, transparency and efficiency of retailers' operations.

"We are using the ASDIS Retail System Management solution to enhance our POS product range with key functions that improve service quality," explains AWEK product manager Markus Tiedge. AWEK is a reliable IT partner specializing in software and hardware solutions for retailing.

Essentially, AWEK is integrating ASDIS product components for modular inventorying, software distribution, monitoring and alerting into its Euromanagement retail solution.

ASDIS Retail System Management monitors and inventories retailers' IT systems and software – and is used by prestigious retail chains such as Drogeriemarkt Müller and the Kaiser's Tengelmann group. All kinds of computers and peripherals can be managed centrally and uniformly with this solution – whether they are POS systems, barcode scanners, empties machines, information terminals or PCs. As a result, less administration effort is required and costs are thus reduced.

ASDIS manages systems efficiently, monitoring the installed software and installing patches and updates automatically, quickly and reliably. Configuration can be carried out device- or branch-specifically, and data transfer can be managed to suit requirements. The solution makes the logs produced on the retail systems available centrally for the purpose of diagnostics or analysis – either on a regular basis or on request. This ensures smooth operation and reduces service costs because fewer site visits are required.
